Maple Lake it is for Stanhope's sewage treatment facility

by BRYN WEESE
Times Staff

Algonquin Highlands is one step closer to a fully functional sewage management plan, and it will be at Maple Lake.

Heather Watson of SGS Lakefield Research and project manager for the municipality's hauled sewage management plan, presented the latest updates to Algonquin Highlands council on September 1.

"I'm here with some very good news," she said. The Environmental Study Report (ESR) that was submitted to the Ministry of Environment in May of this year has been approved.

The ESR stated that the preferred site for the treatment facility was at Maple Lake. The only hope of local residents opposed to this choice was that the Ministry of Environment would not approve the ESR.

With the approval, Algonquin Highlands council can now proceed to the next and final phase of the hauled sewage management plan: the design, implementation and monitoring of a treatment system for hauled sewage at the Maple Lake landfill site.

Algonquin Highlands Reeve Harrison said that, while council has yet to decide on a design or a designer, they have agreed that there should be no open disposal of the township's sewage. This should come as a relief to nearby residents.

Harrison has stated before that a top priority for council is that there is little to no smell from the treatment facility. Council is adamant that this facility will not include a lagoon. Council had previously considered building a septage lagoon at Pine Springs.

Maple Lake's landfill is also under consideration for expansion as part of the township's solid waste management plan.

For more information regarding either the hauled sewage management plan or the solid waste management plan, visit www.algonquinhighlands.ca.

Hawk Lake to lose its landfill

by BRYN WEESE
Times Staff

Algonquin Highlands CAO Lorne Mitchell dropped a bomb last Thursday.

He informed council that, as of April 2006, they would be without the Hawk Lake dump and that two other landfill sites would require $56,200 in additional spending for this year.

Earlier projections of the remaining capacity at Hawk Lake were wrong, Mitchell told council. "The [current] estimated date of capacity is April 2006."

The actual closing date of the site could change, however slightly, based on actual

Beer drinkers can help families devastated by Hurricane Katrina

by LANCE CROSSLEY
Times Staff

Drinking beer has never really been considered a fundraising activity, but people who donate their empties to two fundraising drives can help the victims of Hurricane Katrina.

Those interested in donating their empty beer bottles are encouraged to come to the LCBO parking lot in Kinmount on the next two Sundays (Sept. 11 and 18) from 9 a.m. to noon.

"It's horrifying," says organizer Lorraine Turcotte about the disaster. "Just to imagine that people in our society, in the free world and the land of opportunity, have just suffered so much. It's just unreal."

Another bottle drive being organized by Jody Joanu will take place in Minden Sept. 17 and 18 opposite The Beer Store between 9 a.m. and noon.

Thousands are feared dead in the wake of the hurricane while hundreds of thousands are now roaming the southern states homeless. Recent reports look grim for the long-term recovery of the area as it is estimated 400,000 jobs will be lost from what is already one of the poorer regions of the United States.

Funds will likely go directly to the Red Cross, although Turcotte is looking into a proposal from an organization that will match any donation made from the bottle drives.

Monetary donations will also be accepted. For more information call either Lorraine Turcotte at 448-3070 or Jody Joanu at 286-6404.

amounts of garbage received over the next few months. Also, the application of cover materials and further compaction efforts could extend (or shorten) the life of the dump, but not by much either way.

Before Hawk Lake can be closed, the Ministry of Environment requires a $3,600 survey.

Algonquin Highlands needs to spend more on its other dumps, too.

The ministry is requiring council to undertake further testing at both sites. In anticipation, council has already completed one additional test at the Dorset dump and three at the Oxtongue dump.

As reported by Mitchell to council, the MOE not only requires $12,600 more testing at both sites combined, they also require the installation of seven new testing wells at the Oxtongue dump, which will cost council $21,000.

Add to these costs additional landfill site-related expenditures such as new certificates and the construction of a clay berm at Oxtongue, and the total required additional spending for these two landfill sites is $56,000.

At council, Mitchell's recommendations to approve the spending increases were carried.

Blossoming garden

The "labour of love" garden project benefits all Hyland Crest residents but Mildred Gartshore, Muriel Welch, Ruby Johnson, Dolly Aishford, and Dorothy Shaddock are the most excited. Appreciation is extended to volunteers (standing, from left) Ginger Kulas, who donated the flowers, Elaine Davison, who made the "whimsical friends"

(wooden figurines), and Pat Cupiss. Absent was Nerina Clark who also donated flowers, and Billy Kulas (Ginger's son) and Jacob Findeis who provided sweat and blood. Hyland Crest Activity Coordinator Nancy Lee organized the project. A monetary contribution was made by Mary Hamilton and the seniors' home thanks Minden Home Hardware owners Dave Staley and Jodi Paterson for their contribution. In the garden there are cosmos, lilies, foxglove, carnations and delphinium.

Minden councillor feels the heat over increased assessments

by BRYN WEESE
Times Staff

Dennis Good, incoming president of the Soyers Lake Ratepayers Association, said it best.

"It's a balance between looking after the environment, and being able to afford to enjoy it."

While other cottage and ratepayer associations in the area have to worry about gravel pits, sewage and garbage, Soyers Lake ratepayers made it clear on Saturday night that one of their main concerns is property taxes because of an increase in property assessments.

At their annual general meeting Saturday night at the Delta Pinestone, heated comments concerning property taxes flew about the room, mostly directed at the guest speaker, Minden Hills Councillor Peter Oyler.

For the more than 35 waterfront property owners at the meeting who were told to brace themselves for a significant hike in the worth of their properties, the issue is how this will affect their property taxes.

"You can well imagine the escalation of real estate prices," said Oyler in his address. "It is safe to say that if you live on a waterfront property [in this area], your property taxes could rise 40 to 100 per cent."

As property values are re-adjusted every year by the provincially-legislated Municipal Property Assessment Corporation, or MPAC, so too are property taxes.

In the case of waterfront properties, whose values have been increasing at astonishing rates, the increase in property taxes from year to year are noteworthy.

At last Saturday's meeting, Oyler said that he supports WRAFT, Waterfront Ratepayers After Fair Taxation. That organization, now comprising more than 150 cottager and ratepayer associations, has made its goal to lobby the provincial government to reform the annual property reassessment system.

Oyler also said that he would not support an increase in taxes in Minden Hills.

However, his comment is more complex than it initially appears. As Bert Tait asked: will Minden Hills council consider a lower tax, or mill, rate in light of increased property values?

Minden Hills councillors, indeed councillors from any municipality in Ontario, have absolutely no control over property assessments. That is done by MPAC, a crown corporation which annually generates changes in property values based on sales of property in the area.

While municipal governments have no control over property assessments, they do annually decide on a tax rate for various classifications of properties. That tax rate, set by individual councils, is then equally levied to all properties within a specific classification. As property values increase, so too do taxes because the same tax rate is applied to properties that have increased in value.

What Oyler repeated again and again to a flurry of questions and comments about taxes is that he will definitely not support an increase in council tax rates for the coming fiscal year. Even if the tax rate is not increased, waterfront property taxes will go up because the same tax rate is levied on properties valued at higher costs.

Councillor Oyler clarified his position further by stating that, if given the opportunity, he will support a decrease in council's tax rates to offset the increase in waterfront property values.

False 911 calls keep OPP busy

Officers from the Haliburton Highlands Detachment responded to 99 calls for service from midnight last Thursday to midnight Monday. Fifteen of the calls were false activations of 911.

There were no serious incidents during the weekend but officers were kept busy with minor occurrences.

The officers charged 59 people with various provincial offences under the Liquor Licence Act and Highway Traffic Act.

Lake levels decline

The Kawartha Lakes declined over the dry Labour Day weekend and by early this week were showing lower-than-normal for the time of year, says the Trent Severn Waterway.

A further tightening of the outflow plus some modest flows and rain showers Thursday saw them nearly holding steady into this week.

The demand on the Haliburton reservoirs was increased a little to help replace the water lost to evaporation. The reservoirs were at 52.4 per cent as of Tuesday, dropping 3.6 per cent during the past week, which is very near the long-term decline rate for summer. The decline is expected to be slow as the Thursday (Sept. 8) showers moved through the area.

Traffic a concern if Maple Lake landfill expanded

by BRYN WEESE
Times Staff

A good turnout of nearly 70 people packed into the Stanhope Fire Hall on Wednesday night for the supplemental public meeting about Algonquin Highlands' trash.

The purpose of this meeting, hosted by SGS Lakefield Research and the Township of Algonquin Highlands, was to update ratepayers on the progress of the Waste Management Plan, specifically the results of the General Work Plan, and to provide a forum for the public to contribute ideas of their own.

And that is exactly what the people of Algonquin Highlands did – expressed their ideas, often conflicting with one another. The floor was full of questions, comments, suggestions and criticisms all night long.

"We know what the problem is," said one seasonal resident to Tyler Peters, project manager of the Waste Management Plan. "We have too much trash. Why do we need you?"

After a brief interlude of laughter about consultants, comments from the floor resumed with the possibility of the expansion of the Maple Lake Landfill site, the obvious hot topic of the meeting.

Tyler Peters assured ratepayers again and again that the expansion of the Maple Lake landfill is not certain. It is, however, the only landfill site in Algonquin Highlands tentatively thought suitable for expansion. Only further studies, conducted during the Detailed Work Plan taking place this fall, will be able to assess the feasibility of the Maple Lake landfill site expansion.

There are two other alternatives still under consideration for waste disposal. All three alternatives, or any combination thereof, could work together in the final plan.

Waste exportation outside of the township remains a viable option for the solid waste of Algonquin Highlands. Three facilities have expressed an interest in entering into a long-term contract with the township to accept and dispose of the solid waste. SGS, however, has calculated the estimated cost of such exportation to be $250 per tonne. In that case, it is likely that compaction facilities would be sought to reduce waste and shipments.

Another, more easily attainable avenue for solid waste management is greater waste diversion initiatives. Currently, Algonquin Highlands operates with a diversion (or recycling/composting) rate of 44 per cent, which Peters said is very high. Ideally, the Ministry of Environment would like all townships and municipalities to operate at 60 per cent.

Mandatory composting, greater reduction methods, and potential user fees such as a bag tag system are being considered as a means of achieving greater waste diversion.

"What do you do with the remaining 40 or even 30 per cent," Peters asked.

The answer, most likely, is using landfills, and there are only two options for landfill use. Either a new landfill site is developed, or an existing landfill is expanded. Given that the current landfill sites in Algonquin Highlands will be at capacity in seven years, current landfill usage is not an option.

While SGS is continuing to search for new landfill sites in the township, Peters is not holding his breath for a new site to be found. The topography of the area, the prevalent surface and ground water and the low soil and sand matter between surface and bedrock (to act as a leachate filter) in the township do not make for good or abundant sites.

"How about Queen's Park [as a new landfill site]," a concerned resident suggested from the floor. Not likely, came the reply, therefore site expansion remains most plausible.

Currently, the only township landfill site thought to be capable of expansion is Maple Lake. Maple Lake is also being considered to house Algonquin Highlands' new sewage waste treatment facilities. This double-whammy has some people, namely Maple, Beech and Cameron Lake residents, up in arms.

A common concern is the increase in traffic on the North Shore Road should the Maple Lake landfill site be expanded and utilized as the township's main, if not only landfill.

Maple, Beech and Cameron Lake Property Owners Association President Paul MacInnes raised the issue of two blind corners on North Shore Road and its use by pedestrian traffic.

Gerry Morrison, another concerned ratepayer, asked how many trucks would be using the North Shore Road if the site were expanded.

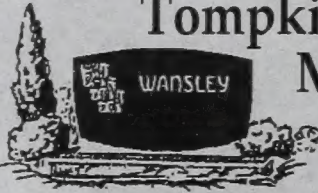

Tyler Peters did not have a specific answer.

Specifically, Peters said that those studies have not been conducted to date because the expansion of Maple Lake has not been decided. What has been decided is that in the General Work Plan, completed this past spring, Maple Lake is the only landfill site considered for expansion studies.

As the Detailed Work Plan, to be completed this winter, progresses, it may be found that the Maple Lake landfill site is not suitable for expansion after all. Only detailed studies of the natural, cultural, technical and economic feasibility of the site's expansion will settle the issue. Those studies are to be conducted this fall as part of the Detailed Work Plan.

For those interested in more information about the Algonquin Highlands Waste Management Plan, a draft of the upcoming Detailed Work Plan is available on the Township's website, www.algonquinhighlands.ca, as are the earlier plans and papers made to date.

Also, SGS and council have available questionnaires for interested people to fill out and submit. The information gathered in the questionnaires, to be submitted by September 16, will be reviewed and imputed by SGS into the Detailed Work Plan. Questionnaires are available at the Algonquin Highlands office in Stanhope.

Citizen of the Year has a hand in all aspects of Kinmount life

by BRYN WEESE
Times Staff

Modest is the best way to describe Jean Anderson, this year's recipient of the Kinmount Citizen of the Year award.

Not only was she modest when receiving the award, she is and has always been modest about the amount of work she has done for the community.

"Jean is the kind of citizen who works quietly behind the scenes providing service that might otherwise be left undone but from which the community receives significant benefits," said the Kinmount District Lions Club in a statement to its members about why it was nominating Jean Anderson for the award.

Anderson has been involved in many facets of community service, from health care to church programs, to seniors' housing and women's groups. But you would never know of all her contributions unless she wins awards like this one.

For many years, Anderson worked as a nurse at the Minden Hospital. A description that has come up often of her work there is "no-nonsense approach."

"When we went through the door, we were always glad to see Jean because we knew that we would receive the best nursing care available," said the nomination.

Anderson has also worked tirelessly in other health-related initiatives.

She was one of the first members of the committee to establish a medical centre in Kinmount and to attract a doctor. Today, partly because of Anderson's efforts, the Kinmount and District Medical Centre employs two doctors, a testament to the committee, and Anderson's hard work.

Anderson was instrumental in the creation of the Kinmount District Health Services Foundation and in

Daren Lum/TIMES

Jean Anderson's commitment to her community has been passed down to her son David who, as president of the Kinmount District Lions Club, presented her with the Citizen of the year award.

having the foundation registered as a charitable organization. She was, and is, the first and only secretary-treasurer of the foundation and continues to carefully scrutinize the expenditures of the funds that come to the foundation to maintain its successful operation.

Treasurer is a role Anderson plays and has played in many organizations.

"I'm good with other people's money," she says with a laugh and a smile.

In 1991, at the time of its creation, Anderson was appointed treasurer for the Kinmount Community Non-Profit Housing Corporation. Initially, the corporation was created to make seniors' housing available in Kinmount. While the corporation currently has not yet succeeded in its goal, it remains registered, the charter renewed annually, and Anderson is still the one and only treasurer.

Anderson has also served as secretary-treasurer of St. James Anglican Church, where she is also the Rector's Warden. Another church organization that Anderson has been involved with is the Anglican Church Women. Her church work has gained her the title of "pillar," both within the church and the community at large.

It is no surprise that Anderson is the recipient of this year's citizen of the year award. As the Lions Club says,

"This recognition is long overdue."

At the award ceremony, the president of the Kinmount District Lions Club, David Anderson, said that he was very honoured to present the award to such a deserving person... and a deserving mother.

The fact that Jean Anderson's son is president of the club is a testament to the caring nature with which she raised her children and the community-minded values she instilled in her three sons.

Jean Anderson's devotion to the Kinmount community is extensive and ongoing. Her diligent work, mostly behind the scenes, has led directly to a better community for all to enjoy.

She continues to add jobs to her already full workload. Why?

"That's Jean's approach," said the nomination. "No matter how busy she is, she will take on a new role when there is an essential job to be done and no one else available to do it."

Anderson has made it clear by example that volunteer efforts make all the difference in a community such as Kinmount.

"The world runs on volunteerism," says Anderson. "Without it, the world would come crashing to a halt."

EDITORIAL COMMENT

It's final

So now it's final. Algonquin Highlands' new sewage treatment facility is going to be built at the Maple Lake landfill site. Note that no one is using the words "septage lagoon" any more. Those two words will forever be linked to previous plans to deal with the municipality's raw sewage at the Pine Springs landfill. That proposal was cast aside in favour of actually treating the sewage at Maple Lake (as opposed to letting nature do the dirty work.)

The Maple Lake property owners' association has yet to come up with a formal position on the news. They're still working out what to think of the proposal to expand the Maple Lake landfill. There is no doubt, however, that one of their main concerns is going to be the increased traffic on North Shore Road.

Unfortunately, North Shore Road is one of those pretty roads that follows the shore of Maple Lake. The present landfill entrance is at a particularly twisty part of the road. Since this council has always shown a commitment to working with its ratepayers, a lot of work will have to be done to address everyone's concerns about the volume and type of traffic. That sort of concern will likely come at a cost. Road work is incredibly expensive and will be especially difficult in that area.

In the not-so-distant past, the biggest expenditure councils had to make was a new snowplow. Waste management, and sewage definitely fits into that category, is now the second biggest expenditure and it's threatening to eclipse even roads spending now that landfill sites are being forced to close and septage can no longer be spread on farmers' fields. This year Algonquin Highlands is spending $1.3 million on roads and $750,000 on waste management.

Compounding the problem is the increase in property values that has some lakefront property owners worried about whether they'll be able to keep the cottage in light of all these new costs.

No one likes the increasing costs of enjoying life in the Highlands. At least in Algonquin Highlands ratepayers have a council they can work with to keep the burden as light as possible.

A worthy tribute

There are those who get things done in a public way, such as politicians and organization CEOs, and then there's Jean Anderson. Quietly, privately, she volunteers her time to several organizations in Kinmount to ensure that the community she loves so much has the services it deserves.

Kinmount is having a bit of a renaissance these days and it's thanks in part to people such as Mrs. Anderson. Because one of the committees she sits on has worked so hard to have a medical centre in the community, Kinmount now boasts its own pharmacy, a first for the village. People from outside the area travel to the village for medical appointments and then can get their prescriptions filled downtown, which in turn is an incentive to do other shopping there.

Mrs. Anderson would probably tell you that there are far better people to be chosen as Kinmount's Citizen of the Year. Such modesty, in light of all she's done, only raises her further in people's esteem. She does what she does because she thinks it's the best thing to do, not to draw attention to herself.

Hey Ross, you're wrong about bringing doctors to town

To the Editor:

Re Ross Jarvis's column, Doctors Come Hither, in the August 30 County Life.

It's been a long time since Ross and I worked together as mavens and I was pleased to see him putting pen to paper in County Life, but he's wrong about attracting doctors to Haliburton.

It's not simply a matter of cash or indenturing young graduates to serve a mandatory term in a small-town setting. All you'd likely get is a stream of young, fresh-faced, mostly inexperienced doctors who would probably vanish the moment their term was up, only to be replaced by another relatively inexperienced crop. Turnover would be high and tenure low. Not good.

As a potential patient, I rather fancy being tended to by a medical person with a few more years of experience under their stethoscope – even though my complaint may be as simple as a carbuncle. (Do people get those things now?) The real trick is get a few good doctors who want to stay the course.

As a marketer, my friend should be looking into the future and designing a plan that not only attracts young talent, but a longer range plan to make them stay. Even a plan to attract older-bodied, seasoned doctors who are tiring of their rat race city practices and are yearning for a sort of early retirement plan. A plan that lets them practice, yet allows freedom for golf, fishing or whatever they fancy.

Yes, by all means give new arrivals all the financial benefits to help them pay off school debts and the like. But go further by making plans to have them stay once

ColumnIs and Letters to the Editor

Here's to Gilligan

The other day, I read that Bob Denver, better known as Gilligan, had died of cancer at the age of 70. While I wasn't brought to tears, I did think it was sad and noteworthy enough to comment about to my 11-year-old son.

His response was, "Who's Gilligan?"

"Well, if you don't know, I'm not going to tell you," I replied. It was the same sage response I gave him when he asked about the birds and the bees.

Later on, however, I felt uneasy about denying him this important information - after all, he was nearing maturity and he might not need to know about the birds and the bees, but he'd surely need this. My wife Carol agreed and asked, "Do you really want him learning about Gilligan's Island from other kids in the schoolyard?"

Of course, she was right. That's how I learned about it and it took me forever to get it right.

"Gilligan was this fellow who got stranded on a desert island," I muttered.

"Oh, like Robinson Crusoe," Ryan answered.

"I'm not sure who you're talking about but Gilligan is famous," I countered. "Don't you kids know nuthin' these days?"

I led him into my office so we could have "the talk." I felt that my office provided the right environment since countless embarrassing situations had been born here. Ryan was, naturally, uneasy.

I began with, "Just sit right down and you'll hear a tale, a tale of a fateful trip...." From there on in I didn't leave out any detail and I'm proud to say that I explained it all in a mature and dignified manner - except for maybe when we got to the part about Ginger.

"So you say that the Skipper, Gilligan, The Professor, Thurston and Lovey Howell, Ginger-grrrrrrrr, and Marie-Ann were seven able-bodied and intelligent people."

"Yes," I nodded eagerly. "Ginger was especially able-bodied."

"And during almost every episode they had some outside visitor get stranded there for a while?"

"Yes," I replied again, "talk about dumb luck, huh? I mean what are the odds?"

"But they could never hitch a ride out?" he asked while looking at me sort of like his mother does.

I then went on to explain to him about the Harold Hecubus-factor, named after the episode where the gang wrote a hit musical to impress the world-famous director Harold Hecubus who happened to land on the island. "Now that was entertainment," I noted.

"So what you're saying is that Hecubus left them stranded so he could claim the musical as his own?" Ryan asked incredulously.

"That's what they heard on the radio they made from coconuts and other pieces they scrounged off the island. Hard to believe, huh?"

"Uh, sure. But if they could build radios and fancy huts, why didn't they just build a boat or even a transmitter to signal help?"

I walked out of the room shaking my head. "I knew it!" I screamed.

"What wrong?" my wife asked.

"The boy's too young to understand," I answered. "He's asking silly questions."

We ended our discussion at that point so that Carol could intervene and explain that Gilligan's Island wasn't a reality show. Instead, she said that it was purely meant to be light-hearted entertainment and how, because of this, you had to suspend disbelief and just go with the premise.

You know, I still don't believe her.

Fill up on the truth

As an aspiring environmental engineer, Steven Thornton must be astounded by the lesson he has just learned about the power of the printed word.

It was only a couple of weeks ago that this newspaper published an essay by the young man from Wilberforce urging readers to cut down on their gasoline consumption.

Readers of the Times, every one of them an environmentalist, took only a day or so to mull over his arguments and then stopped buying gasoline.

Or at least tried to stop buying it. Or wished they could.

It was all because of their concerns for the ecology and not because of the pump-price tidal wave that washed over us about then.

Folks went out of their way to avoid the pumps of Minden, even if going out of their way took them as far as Kinmount for a fill-up at an independent that was a day late changing its prices.

Thornton's essay made the usual arguments about walking instead of driving, which would make more sense if only a few more Haliburton people lived within walking distance of the places they want to go. It is an old tune and much sweeter than the truth, which dare not speak its name because none of us want to hear it.

The truth is that, when it comes to fossil fuels and the damage they do, we have seen the enemy and it is us, except we'd rather not talk about it. Just going for a walk won't fix it.

The truth is that Haliburton and Muskoka and the rest of cottage country must do about as much harm to our world as any place in Canada.

There must be learned research out there somewhere to support this, but the math is simple enough.

Cottagers must consume about twice as much fuel in a summer week as their citybound neighbours.

Some of this is obvious. A typical round trip between home and cottage is 250 miles, equal to five days a week of commuting 25 miles to work.

Ah, you say, but the stay-at-home burns up gas meandering around the city on his days off. That argument assumes that the cottager stops driving when he gets to his piece of paradise; if that were so, there would be no restaurants or golf courses in Haliburton County.

The driving done by the stay-at-home will be on city roads that had to be there anyhow, so he and his cottaging neighbour could drive to work on the other five days of the week.

Cottagers use roads that are there just for them. They will do most of their driving on modern highways that would still be winding trails if it were not for the urgent need to move them north each weekend.

Their escape route floats north on the river of fossil fuels it takes to build it and then maintain it.

Everything from gravel pits to graders depends on petroleum and so does the road's very surface.

If the cottage at the end of that escape route is of the modern, suburbanized variety, the escape is to a kind of parallel universe, engineered with the same heating/cooling system and electronic gizmos as his city house.

There will be toys at the end of the road, some of them outrageous fuel guzzlers and polluters. There will be a motorboat for sure, probably more than one. There might be a personal watercraft or two, an ATV, a trail bike, a snowmobile or all of the above.

We have seen the enemy and it is us. That is the point of all this, not that cottagers are bad people or that cottaging should be done away with.

Indeed, I was part of the weekly escape route until I retired and I would be yet if I still worked in Toronto. And I drive a four-wheel-drive pickup, which is almost as bad as owning an SUV, and own a chainsaw and snowmobile and ATV. The four-wheel-drive is a necessity on a private road and the rest are tools for managing my forest. See, I can rationalize as well as the next guy. Rationalizing is what most of us do best. Our enemy is not being able to see that we can't go on as we have been.

Thornton and the rest of environmentalism's true believers say that a walk to the post office would be easy and good for us and that it would make a difference, however small, and they are right, so far as it goes.

So far as it goes is not very far at all. We have a lifestyle that nature won't support and the changes the next generation and the generation after that must make will be neither small nor easy.

Target market

you've got 'em.

I'd venture to say that most medical school attendees are city born and bred and not inclined to up stakes and move north to a smaller venue. You need to do target marketing here and identify those who were born in smaller communities.

And persuade them to return to their roots.

Anyhow, these are just some thoughts on the matter and it was great to see Ross's picture in the press and know that his writing skills are still as sharp as ever.

Barn fire could have been so much worse

To the Editor:

We are two women from Ohio, spending the summer in Gelert. Last Sunday at the Lochlin landfill, our car died. In just a few minutes, we were surrounded by nine or ten people, including the landfill attendant.

Between them, they found and fixed the problem, obtained jumper cables, started the vehicle and in a very short time, we were on our way.

Just another reason we love the Highlands - the wonderful people. Our thanks to everyone who helped.

Gull Lake takes up the fight against gravel pit

by BRYN WEESE
Times Staff

Brought on by loud noises, clouds of dust, heavy traffic and excessive trailers, Gull Lake property owners are taking a long, hard look at the Leary gravel pit owned and operated by Leveque Bros. Haulage.

Not only has the Gull Lake Cottagers Association presented its concerns to Minden Hills council, members also spent a great deal of time discussing the issue at their annual general meeting held at Kilcoo Camp this past Saturday.

"It is very important that bylaws do not get broken," said association president Barbara Reid. "Otherwise,

Darren Lum/TIMES

Pat Millard, with her husband Jack at back, wipes the dust and dirt that accumulates on her deck only a few hours after being cleaned. The Millards live next to the Leary gravel pit off Deep Bay Road.

why have them at all?"

There seems to be some confusion, among both property owners and council whether the gravel pit is a wayside pit or a commercial pit, said Reid. If it were a wayside pit, as it was originally operated, then provincial laws, however lenient, regulate it but the gravel acquired at the pit can only be used for public works such as road construction.

If, on the other hand, the Leary pit is a commercial pit, it is free to sell the product, i.e. gravel, to whomever it pleases. In the latter case, however, it becomes regulated by township bylaws, not provincial ones.

To clarify the issue as best he could, Minden Hills

Councillor Ingram Wessell addressed the crowd.

Wessell sympathized with those property owners who live nearby but said that the problems are residual from when it was a provincially regulated wayside pit.

"I understand your plight," he said. "You come up here for the weekend and have to listen to that noise."

Wessell said that he understood that the Leveque Bros' work would not be done until next spring or summer. He did say, however, that he believed the blasting was over for a while at least.

Blasting has been but one of many concerns for nearby residents.

"I know the people on Mariposa Lane had a terrible summer," Wessell said. "What's bothering me is the rehabilitation; it's a terrible mess."

Company says sand piles will be used to rehabilitate pit

Wessell was referring to the piles of sand and earth that have created dust and sand storms for nearby residents.

In particular, Pat and Jack Millard, the adjacent property owners, have had serious dust and sand problems all summer long.

The Leveque Bros. say the piles of sand and earth around the pit will be used to rehabilitate the area when the company is finished with the site.

The controller of the site for the Leveque Bros., Bill Linnen, says he is available to talk with the property owners and answer any questions they may have. He says it is important for people to understand the operation and not to create myths about what is going on there.

Whatever power the Gull Lake Cottagers' Association may have, it intends to use it to at least control the noise levels generated at the quarry site. At Saturday's meeting, a petition was circulated to ask that the existing Minden Hills noise bylaw be enforced 24 hours a day and that the Leary gravel pit be regulated for noise and times of operation.

Recently, at Minden Hills council, Chief Bylaw Enforcement Officer Fraser MacDonald indicated that he and OPP Staff Sergeant Bob Walli are seeking to change the noise bylaw to apply only during the nighttime hours. MacDonald said he and the OPP receive many calls that do not constitute noise bylaw infractions.

For concerned residents, Councillor Wessell has made himself available to answer questions as best he can. He can be reached through the Minden Hills township office at 286-1260.

Keep those septic tanks pumped out: Gull Lake AGM

by BRYN WEESE
Times Staff

The following are brief notes from the Gull Lake Cottagers' Association annual general meeting on September 3 at Kilcoo Camp.

Rob Davies of Ecoethic, and a former Kilcoo camper, shared tips for a healthier septic system. His advice was timely, given that by 2007 septage in Minden Hills has to be dealt with in treatment plants and cannot be spread on farmers' fields, as it has been in the past.

Increased usage of cottage septic tanks over the last 20 years has caused a lot of extra burden on tanks, says Davies. Specifically, the addition of washing machines, dishwashers, high flush toilets and other water-consuming devices add too much water to the system too quickly. The influx of water into the tank stirs up the sewage and allows solids to drain into the tile bed (designed for the liquid sewage) where it eventually makes its way to the lake.

Davies' plea was for cottagers to be more conservative with their water use as well as eschewing anti-bacterial products such as certain soaps and chlorine.

"You need lots of bacteria to treat sewage," Davies told the crowd. If there is no bacteria, he said, the solids will not break down.

Instead, Davies urged cottagers to use environmentally friendly products stamped with Environment Canada's Eco-Logo.

Finally, Davies closed his presentation by dispelling septic tank myths.

Do not put meat or yeast in your tank to artificially add bacteria, green stripes are an indication of an unhealthy tank (not a healthy one) and both sides, the solid and the liquid sides, in all septic systems should be almost completely pumped out every three to five years.

Fortunately, his sage advice was wisely delivered before lunch was served.

For details about Ecoethic, visit www.ecoethic.ca.

Elections

Three association directors were unanimously re-elected for another two-year term: Siobhan Carmichael, Sarah Sward and Heather Tanti.

Stepping down from the association directorate this year is Kirk Hutchinson. With a young child now in his family, he feels he does not have the time to donate to the association. He had been serving as Commodore of the Gull Lake regatta – the self-acclaimed oldest in Ontario.

Any person or persons interested in assuming the role of Commodore, which requires attending some director meetings and the planning of the Gull Lake Regatta, is encouraged to speak to President Barbara Reid.

Hospital donation

With the introduction of the Gull Lake merchandise line and the financial success of the raffle and food sales at the regatta this past summer, the association is donating $1,000 to the Minden Hospital.

The association continues to sell "frosties," or foam drink insulators with 100 per cent of the proceeds going to the hospital.

Reid is very happy with the finances of the association and is delighted that the donation was possible again this year.

"We have a lot more control over the finances," she said. "They are looking very good."

Haliburton County has Geographic Information System maps on website

by BRYN WEESE
Times Staff

Highly detailed maps of Haliburton County are now available for free over the Internet.

Since May of 2004, Geodata Resources Incorporated has been working hard to prepare Haliburton County's GIS program for the county's website.

Original estimates projected the completion of the website feature by January 2006, but hard work has made the Internet mapping and county atlas available sooner than previously expected, says Jane Tousaw, development services co-ordinator and planner with the county.

"Through the concerted efforts of the technical team, the Web-enabled community GIS is now available for use by the public," she said.

GIS, or Geographic Information System, is a recently new form of map-making that involves not only physical objects, such as roads, lakes, and towns. It also has the ability to "map" and combine demographic, economic and other intangible traits with conventional physical bodies such as lakes and roads.

The end result at the most professional levels of usage is the ability to create highly intelligent maps that could include such statistical analyses as population densities, levels of income by region, waste production by neighbourhood.

Although the county's usage will probably not result in such in-depth analysis, and privacy laws prevent the public from using the same highly sophisticated programs as county and township staff, the possibilities for simple analysis are there for public users.

Now that the system is in place, county and township staff will have a new set of tools at their disposal with which to govern their townships.

The new website feature offers three different types of Internet mapping programs, two of which are available to the public for free.

As mentioned, the municipal GIS function is restricted to county and township staff. It offers more than 100 map layers, including streets, roads, properties, buildings, topographic data as well as environmentally sensitive areas. Together, these layers can be used in combination with each other or separately to create a tailored, detailed map for any specific purpose county and/or township staff may be working on.

The county does offer the public a simplified version. The community GIS does not require any special password to access the program or expensive software to appreciate the GIS experience. Albeit with fewer available layers than the municipal GIS, the public can peruse, enjoy and print very detailed maps with street names, 911 lot numbers, lake names, towns and settlements.

In a communiqué with the county, Tousaw says that the new web GIS program available through the county's website will benefit residents, cottage associations and businesses in the county.

"This web GIS is a tool for everyday people and is designed for users to access specific information in a spatial context and perform some simple forms of analysis on the data," Tousaw stated in the letter to county council.

Through the community GIS feature, individuals are able to locate 911 addresses, street names, lake names, and villages.

Although the county does state, "the data presented (on the GIS map) is for illustrative purposes only and is not a substitute for a legal survey," the maps do give approximations of property lines and lot boundaries as well.

In addition to the GIS features on the county's website, the Haliburton County Street Atlas is also available for free to the public.

The county-wide atlas includes 371 pages of maps marking roads, 911 addresses and address number ranges. While the Internet atlas is free to view and print, preprinted hard copies are being sold at the county office in Minden.

For slower Internet connections, the county does say the GIS program may take upwards of several minutes to load. Once running, however, the website appears to operate smoothly with new map retrievals loading relatively fast, considering the size of the maps and the detail.

The GIS mapping programs as well as the new County Street Atlas can be accessed through www.haliburtoncounty.ca under the Municipal tab in the Maps and GIS option.

A rider and his horse team perform their victory lap at last weekend's Kinmount Fair.

Krazy in Kinmount

Nothing gets people coming and going like the biggest little country fair for miles around

Kinmount Fair's Past President, Guy Scott, said attendance for the annual event was down slightly at nearly 40,000 people but, he added, "It wasn't the best or worse year." The fair's Warrior's Day Parade, led by the Haliburton Highlands Pipes & Drums with a Colour Party, was more significant because it's the Year of the Veteran. The parade included members of 28 Legions and featured approximately 40 entries. The Shriners Club was out in full force with a train, scooters and go-karts in the parade; more than five Shriners' groups were there, including those from Oshawa, Richmond Hill, Haliburton and Bancroft, Markham and Barrie. Quilter Esther Graham, a perennial fair winner, had the championship quilt. This "master quilter" will compete in the district finals in Port Perry. Dan Swinson from Kinmount won Best Decorated Car on Saturday and Bobcaygeon resident Bobby Cousineau took top spot in the "Big Cars" demolition on Saturday. Minden resident Chris Loughry won for the Best Decorated Car while Mike Taylor was top of the heap in the "Big Car" demolition competition on Sunday. In the Light Horse Pull category Tom Saunders of Cameron won while Keith Hobden of Lindsay captured first in the Heavy Horse Pull. Above, Kasey Nicholson (sponsored by John Austin and Sons Ltd.) won the coveted honour of the Kinmount Fair Ambassador. At left, the Camerons, father Clayton and son Luke, finished second in the Haflinger horses category at the Kinmount Fair.

The Scrambler ride brings out the laughter from ride goers.

Haliburton Legion member Ed Pickard sings the national anthem, officially opening the Kinmount Fair. Past President Guy Scott looks on.

Poultry Judge Bill Shrum takes a close look at an entry in the "Bird House" on the first official day of the Fair. Shrum has judged poultry for 35 years all over North America. He owns more than 300 of his own.

The Haliburton Highlands Pipes & Bands leads out the Colour Party during the Warrior's Day Parade in front of the Kinmount cenotaph.

MP Barry Devolin and MPP Laurie Scott present veteran Noel Swift of Minden with an honorary rosette. Veterans were given a special ceremony, honouring their sacrifices made from active military duty. There were approximately 50 veterans honoured.

Founder of Homestead Carpet known for his love of family and laughter

by PAULINE JOHNSON
Special to The Times

Family and friends came from near and far to Monk's Funeral Home on Wednesday to say goodbye to Al Johnson of Halls Lake. Al died just before the long weekend, having battled cancer for several months.

While living in Scarborough with a young family, Al and Anne had purchased their cottage on Halls Lake 30 years ago. He dreamt of living in Haliburton and 12 years later brought his company, Homestead Carpet, to Minden. Even though he had anticipated an early retirement, Homestead Carpet eventually became Sears Flooring Centre and Al and Anne worked harder. Work and his family comprised his life.

His passing will leave a void in the lives of so many people. He made his mark as a businessman, but he excelled at being a family man and friend. He was a man who never stood on ceremony, who never put on airs. The simplicity and sincerity of his greetings and dealings endeared him to one and all.

His sister, Kathy Dietsch, welcomed close family members and friends at her home after the memorial service. Larry Magee claimed, "Here's the tribute, right here. These are the people who knew him for what he was."

Family gatherings and reunions were important to Al and, up to this year, he had attended them all. He loved to party and dance at family weddings. Al was one of five brothers in a family of seven children so with brothers, sisters, children, spouses, and grandchildren in attendance there was a multitude of memories running through everyone's mind as people gathered and the storytelling began.

Having grown up in a family of five brothers and two sisters and survived the lean years of World War II, it was natural that the children endured a rough and tumble existence. Kathy recalls a time at age 10 when she and Al, along with their brother Art, had gone to the clay pits where they had fights with gangs. "When we were coming back, Al swore. Art and I threatened to tell Dad so Al tied us to a tree in Monarch Park and left us there."

Bob, the youngest brother, remembers the time Al tried to ascend the walls of their house and the one next door on Gerrard Street. With only a narrow alley between the houses, Al assumed he could go up with a leg on each wall. Much to his regret the fall was a nasty one. However, they were hardy boys and lived through many hair-raising adventures together. They might taunt each other like crazy and play tricks on each other all the time but they grew into a close knit family, ready to support each other and, most importantly, to share the joy of laughter, even if it was directed at themselves.

Al loved to provoke the laughter of children and his niece Susan remembers him as someone who hid in the closet when he visited his brother Jim, jumping out at her and her young sister to elicit squeals of surprise. "He loved to tease us," she recalls, noting Al's similarity to her own father in that respect. Chris, another niece, also remembers Al for his shenanigans saying, "He was just like his older brother, Jim, and his younger brother, Art. Al would tease anybody just for a laugh."

Essentially a family man, Al occasionally took time for personal pursuits. He loved to fish, but one winter he was so busy at work that he didn't get his fishing boat out of the water before the ice came and his boat remained frozen in place for the duration. His brothers laughed about that. On Labour Day weekend, his brother Bob and nephews, Scott, Layne and Larry took out Al's docks. Al's wife, Anne, commented that they probably wouldn't go back in.

Bob reminisced about the dives he and Al had gone on while with the Canadian Sub Aqua Club. Diving on wrecks at Tobermory and camping while there, created many memories he will treasure.

Al was a builder, a man who worked with his hands, a trait he inherited from his dad, probably because being self-sufficient was a way of life for people of his dad's and Al's generation. The projects that he completed around his home stand as testament to the joy he took in creating finished products himself. Whether building a cupboard, a deck or completing his basement, Al was a real hands-on person. It's a trait that he shared with his son, Glenn, who also works at the Sears Flooring Centre.

Al was also a collector. He enjoyed going to auction sales and garage sales. One special find was a player piano. It wasn't operational but the idea of it held endless possibilities and the promise of good times with others.

He will be missed at the monthly poker games he enjoyed with family, cousins and friends. The warmth that he spread when around people was infectious. Alex Cummings, his cousin said, "He was a terrible poker player but he had a great sense of humour and he would have us in tears we laughed so hard."

Jim Cummings remembers the day that Al saved his life when he was ten years old. Having swum out to a raft, Jim levered himself out of the water just as someone did the same on the other side. The raft clipped him on the chin and the next thing he remembered was Al dragging him onto the shore.

"That always endeared me to Al and I never forgot it," Jim said.

Larry Magee recalls, "He introduced me to ice fishing on Halls Lake. He taught me how to handle a steel line and fish for trout."

Bryce Johnson added, "He taught me where the big rocks were to stand on when I went out swimming so I could take a break."

Al was especially appreciated by his own children because he was a good listener, gave them unconditional love and let it be known that he was always just a phone call away.

He said to Carolyn, his youngest daughter, "I'm not afraid to die. I just don't want to leave you." He found it so difficult to face the ones he loved with dire news. Carolyn and her daughter, Mackenzie, spent the summer at Halls Lake to be with her father in his final months. His other daughters, Colleen and Julie, visited regularly along with the grandchildren.

A common lament when someone dies is, "I wish I had spent less time at work and more time with my family." Al had no regrets on that score, having left his family a legacy of love, laughter and wonderfully warm memories.

Pauline Johnson is married to Al's brother Bob.

"Being self-sufficient was a way of life for people of his generation"

The rainfall for July was only 26.4 mm. For August it was 69.2 mm, slightly higher but still quite dry. Almost half of the rain happened August 4.

We were very lucky in missing hurricane Katrina. The only effect in this area was a cloudy day. However, there are still three months of hurricane season, September, October and November. Keep lucky.

Average Low: 12.7C, 54.8F

Average for the month: 19.5C, 67.2F

Average for last August: 17.3C, 63.1F

Highest Temperature August 3: 32.5C, 90.5F

Hospital auxiliary prepares to celebrate fifth anniversary of charitable efforts

by JEAN ROBSON
Special to The Times

In September, 2002, six Minden ladies met to discuss the formation of an Auxiliary for the new Minden hospital and the Hyland Crest Seniors Home. These ladies were Donna Monk, Corinne Arsenault, Fern Donnelly, Katie Parker, Norma Nobles and Bonnie Fleischaker.

On September 29, 2002 the gift shop was open and a membership drive was on.

Five years later there is a membership of 75 and the official name is Minden Health Care Auxiliary (M.H.C.A.). These members volunteer in the gift shop, the hospital, the physiotherapy department and the seniors' home.

Their fundraising involves bake sales, lucky draws, card parties, spring bulb sales, and of course, the gift shop. On October 29 there will be a curling bonspiel, and on November 6 a fashion show. Anyone can come to curl in the bonspiel, and tickets for the fashion show are available at the gift shop or from an Auxiliary member.

To date this Auxiliary has purchased the following equipment or provided service to:

- Hospital
- neonatal scale

- procedural stretcher
- vital signs monitor
- disinfectant
- sterilizer
- comfort-room furniture

Hyland Crest Home:

- 2 disinfectors
- sure temp. thermometers
- decorated tub rooms
- provided a donation towards two large T.V.s
- CD player, tapes and talking books
- 43 new mattresses
- 62 gift bags at Christmas

To celebrate their 5th anniversary there will be a gathering of the volunteers on September 14 from 7:00 - 9:00 p.m. in the auditorium at Hyland Crest, at which time the six founding members will be honored.

They can always use more members, so if you have a few hours to spare, please join us. The regular meetings are held on the first Thursday of each month at 1:30 p.m. in the Fireside Lounge at Hyland Crest.

To make enquiries about the bonspiel please call Marilyn Burrows at 286-4925; about the fashion show please call Billie Shuyler at 286-4531.

7 Milne Street, Minden, Ontario K0M 2K0

The purpose of the Second Public Meeting is to obtain public comments on a proposed Zoning By-Law that will apply to the entire Municipality and which is intended to replace By-Law # 3-78 (former Township of Snowdon Zoning By-Law), By-Law # 86-26 (former Townships of Anson, Hindon and Minden) and By-Law # 4-81 (former Township of Lutterworth), all as amended.

The proposed Zoning By-Law will affect all lands within the Township, therefore no map is provided as part of this notice.

The purpose of the proposed Zoning By-Law is to prohibit the use of land and the erection of buildings and structures except for such purposes as are set out in this Zoning By-Law and to regulate the type of construction, height, bulk, location, size, floor area, spacing, character and use of buildings or structures on the lands covered by this By-Law. This Zoning By-Law is intended to conform with and implement the policies contained within the Township's Official Plan.

Jean Anderson well deserving of Kinmount's accolades

Please note that The Minden Times will be published on Thursdays starting September 15th and this column will need to be submitted by Tuesday noon rather than Wednesday. The rationale for this change was well-presented by Managing Editor Martha Perkins in her September 2 editorial with a goal of providing even better service to both loyal readers and advertisers.

With crisper morning temperatures and soaring fuel costs, discussions here at the old farmhouse over first coffee seem increasingly focused on energy conservation. While there is no question that every effort must be made to seal out drafts, bring in more wood and consider ordering from Sears rather than Victoria's Secrets catalogue.

My personal solution is Cottage Socks.

Available at the Kinmount Artisans Marketplace these hand knitted, bulky, woollen, reasonably priced treasures come in a variety of colours with local designer labels by Grace, Rose, Sarah and Louise. Granddaughter Emma, now Head Girl at her beloved Trafalgar Castle School, is required to live in residence as part of her leadership role. Now that old Castle has to be drafty so in her first care package Grandma will include two pair of those cozy Cottage Socks.

Congratulations to Jean Anderson chosen by the Kinmount & District Lions Club as Citizen of the Year, an honour well-deserved. Many will know Jean from her nursing years giving compassionate care at the Minden Hospital. Described as a volunteer who works quietly and capably behind the scenes Jean Anderson's efforts have brought great benefit to her community and it is the richer for having this commitment. Well done, Jean, and thank you.

Mark your calendars for the Kinmount Thanksgiving Homecoming Studio Tour on Saturday and Sunday, October 8 and 9 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. This year the Tour welcomes three new studios with artist Brenda Mulholland at the Railroad Station, Diana and Ken McLeod at Birdsong and photographer Holly Lougheed teaming up with potter Bernie Nicholson with Shots and Pots on the Galway Road. Tour brochures giving information and directions to all the Studios are available at local businesses, the Marketplace or by calling 488-2938. This tour is compact and easy to manage on a busy schedule and a hungry gas tank.

Now for the Scoring News with your usual reminder to keep busy and well. They go together. Audrey Vick (286-2423) reminds that euchre at the Gelert Community Centre will begin on Tuesday, September 20 at 7:30 p.m. and continue every other Tuesday. The cost is $1; refreshments are served and new players, including beginners, are welcome.

Maple Lake owners urged to get involved on issues

The executive of the Maple, Beech, and Cameron Lakes Property Owners Association is making a sustained effort to keep members informed about the issues important to the residents of these lakes. Therefore, the following report addresses some of the issues raised at the last property owners' meeting as well as a few tidbits of additional coverage.

The board of directors would like to thank Reeve Eleanor Harrison for the insightful information that she provided on behalf of council during the annual general meeting. Harrison spoke briefly about the pending sewage management plan at the Maple Lake Landfill site. She encouraged all property owners to attend an informative public meeting as well as to fill out a survey with regard to this sensitive issue.

The executive team encourages all property owners to do their best to stay involved and informed. If you need more information about the waste management plan, contact Denis Lane at denlane@rogers.com. To get a copy of the survey, visit the township office.

Harrison also gave a brief update on the status of the Frost Centre, recycling in Algonquin Highlands, road repair plans and 911 emergency service. She reminded all property owners to keep 911 numbers and road signs visible at all times and to take down old road signs and numbers. Council realizes that there is a problem with stolen and damaged signs. It is in the process of seeking a new solution. In the meantime, if there is a problem with signs in your neighborhood, call 705 286-1333. If you have any 911 questions in general, contact George Sharp at gsharp@hotmail.com.

Cliff Hatch, a representative for WRAFT (Waterfront Ratepayers After Fair Taxation), updated members on the looming 2006 tax assessments. The association is a member of WRAFT and the executive team urges all property owners to write to local MPPs to express your concerns. Contact Napier Simpson at napiersimpson@sympatico.com if you want more information about WRAFT.

President Paul MacInnes updated members on the status of the Trails and Tours Network, of which the association is a member.

The executive passed motions to explore posting a warning sign at the Maple Lake boat launch and to see about having the speed limit on North Shore Road reduced to 40 km. an hour. The membership also voted to increase fees to $20 per year.

Due to a computer glitch between Macintosh and PC systems, some members may not have received their newsletters electronically. If you have a Macintosh system or would like to receive a hard copy of the newsletter via "snail mail", contact Kim Scerri at kim_mikescerri@hotmail.com. Kim would also appreciate any help in solving the pc/mac compatibility mystery. If you know anything about this and are willing to help, please contact her.

One important note. The August 19th edition of The Minden Times stated, "MacInnes said the executive had recommended that the association support the proposed septage lagoon plan at the Maple Lake landfill. He said that both plans were well conceived and necessary, given the short life span left at Algonquin Highlands' landfill sites and the Ontario government's decision to stop allowing untreated septage to be spread on fields."

By way of clarification, the executive members, had just received the information regarding the waste management plans the week before the scheduled meeting. None of these plans were discussed in any detail, nor were any decisions made regarding this issue. The new executive is looking into researching it in more detail. New directors welcomed to the board include Kelly Bergshoeff, Nancy Westcott, Doug Fraser, Gerry Morrison and Doug Palmer. Marnie Twidale retired from the position of treasurer. We would like to thank her for her many years of service and for the excellent job that she did keeping both the books and directors in order.

The 2005/2006 board of directors includes: Paul MacInnes as president, Napier Simpson as vice-president, Denis Lane as secretary, Doug Fraser as treasurer, er, Kelly Bergshoeff as social director, Kim Scerri as newsletter editor as well as Ian Wall, John Mullholland, George Sharp, Peter Lobo, Bill Naunton, Doug Palmer, Gerry Morrison, Nancy Westcott and Brend Glendenning as directors.

MacInnes reported that there will be a change in the organization's structure. The executive members will work in teams dealing with the various issues as they arise. The executive team is planning a meeting within the next couple of weeks, so more information will be available in the Stanhope Life column then.

The executive would like to thank The Minden Times and Canoe FM for their support for publicizing meetings and information.

Riding the bus is easy – it's getting off and going to school that is sometimes hard to do. Brandon Petry, Krissy Deboer and Nichole Honderish arrived bright and early to a new school year of fun and adventure.

Brandon Petry had the coolest toy in the Archie Stouffer Elementary School playground.

Stephan Schollig was trying to find a place to hide from his classes. It didn't take him long to realize those lockers haven't been cleaned all summer.

Jenna Hamilton really enjoyed her first recess of the year. With weather reminiscent of summer, children at Archie Stouffer Elementary School received a warm welcome back at school.

Back to school at Archie Stouffer

Brooke Saunders, Kendall Anderson, Lisa Dunn and Karly Gazley showed off their new bags to one another in the school yard. Apparently, knapsacks with wheels and extendable luggage handles are in style these days.
